GREENWOOD CITY

Mrs. Collette Morgan, Corres.
Gay splashes of color spread over the daisies, buttercups and clover as they slanted in a slight westerly wind. They were the very first.

June shimmering with light and movement as four of us left for the sea shore. No one can ever think of Maine as bleak in June; its towns buried in green and its fields sprayed with a rich burst of bloom. We enjoyed it all along the roadides.

On arriving at the shore the air was fresh and cool and the wild roses so abundant, released a heavy stirring fragrance.

Straight ahead the earth fell away in a frozen cascade of rocks, weather beaten and old, down, down to the shore far below.

We followed the paths and breathed deeply of the astringent air noting the dainty columbines nodding their heads, so at home clinging to the rocks. And everywhere, little nameless plants had sprung up wherever there was an inch of soil to spare.

The surface of the sea with its green water, changed, sometimes rushing and hoisterous, sometimes calm, so alluring and beautiful.

Who could stand on the brink here among the rocks and roses without being deeply stirred at the loveliness of it all?

The waves that dipped and dashed and baby son, Timothy; Mr. and Mrs. Squeak Buck, Cindy and Carroll, of East Stoneham.

and sparked with sprays of foaming white water beat out an even rhythm soothing to the ears. They sprang into the air then subsided only to come again with a roar as they dashed upon the rocks below.

more words do not fully express it; it must be felt and enjoyed in silence.

We ate our lunch and listened to the tumbling surging waves and watched the lobster boats at work; the gulls rising and falling against the curve of the sky while others clamored on the ledges and fought for the morsels of food we threw to them. At times one would stand as if carved in ivory with his clean white breast feathers unruffled and alert, spotted you and off he flew.

The little red house, standing slightly back, looking, I'm sure never grows weary of a sea pouring out, a great wide circle to the sky, the fierce winds and raging storms but stands awed by its splendor, power and grandeur.

Too soon the time came to leave but there's memory of high sea cliff ledges, white gulls trooping and crying among the rocks and roses—in short the grand beauty of a few short hours at the sea.

Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Chase were dinner guests, Sunday at Mr. and Mrs. Leonas Holt's.

Callers this week at Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Morgan's were Mr. and Mrs.

GUIDANCE DEPARTMENT

To the teachers that retired in June, namely, Mrs. Louie P. Coffin, Mrs. Ruth C. Hastings, Mrs. Colista Morgan and Mrs. Ethel Ward, the Guidance Department extends very best wishes in your retirement. In your all inclusive "one hundred and forty-four years of teaching and counseling", most of the time with the youth that comprises our local communities in SAD 44 you have accomplished a record that will mark your era in education as monumental in our communities. As a tribute to your years of teaching and counseling, may we quote from William Lyon Phelps, "I Love to Teach".

"I do not know that I could make entirely clear to an outsider the interest I have in teaching. I had rather earn my living by teaching than in any other way. In my mind, teaching is not merely a life work, a profession, an occupation, a struggle; it is a passion. I love to teach. I love to teach as a painter loves to paint, as a musician loves to play, as a singer loves to sing, as a strong man rejoices to run a race. Teaching is an art—an art so great and so difficult to master that a man or woman can spend a long life at it without realizing much more than his limitations and mistakes, and his distance from the ideal. "But the main aim of my happy days has been to become a good teacher, just as every architect wishes to be a good architect and every professional poet strives toward perfection."

The Basic Concepts of Guidance from Kindergarten through Grade 12 will be discussed in three installments in this column on June 26, July 3, and July 10.

The first installment relates to the Basic Concepts of Guidance from Kindergarten through grade six. A desirable guidance format for these grades may include the following features:

1. The maintenance of a personal inventory to provide for: a. The introduction and use of an adequate cumulative record to be started when the student enters kindergarten and to continue through each grade with pertinent data on the family, the student and his academic progress; b. A standardized testing program from kindergarten through grade 6; to include mental maturity and an achievement testing. At the current time an achievement test is given in every elementary grade in SAD 44 and mental maturity testing done in grades three and five.

c. The identification of the students who have problems both within and without the school, such as: (1) students who have specific weaknesses in mastering the basic skills, knowledge, and understanding taught in the elementary grades; (2) students who have difficulty in fitting into a regular school program because of mental ability, either high or low. In this group will be found the students needing special class placement because of low mentality, the group of slow learners needing remedial placement. Identification to be made by the use of intelligence testing, both group and individual.

(3) Referrals of students who have health problems not conducive to school and home adjustment to school health department, physician, oculist and other medical personnel. (4) Students who have problems of social and emotional adjustment needing the attention of a child psychologist, social worker or a child worker. (5) Students who have talents or very intense interests in a specific area; often this needs special attention from the Guidance Department and maintenance.

ance of good habits of study, involving guidance orientation on how to improve study procedures. 3. The development and maintenance of good habits of school citizenship. 4. Use of materials in the classroom to show not only how people live, but how to make a living. 5. Establishment of healthy relationship between the parent and the school, in order that there may be a mutual understanding of the home program and of the school program for the student which may involve home visits. 6. Cooperation with the student's next school (Telstar Regional) at the end of grade six by furnishing it with pertinent information about the student, and by enabling the student to visit the school for an Orientation program.
